

Hans-Jörg Keller, PhD

International Coach, Consultant and Trainer

Senior Consultant

Since over 20 years I have accompanied globalisation processes and have thereby successfully guided executives and professionals from business and administrations in the challenges of cultural collaborations.

During my studies of German and Italian contemporary history, and during my psychology training in the Netherlands, USA, Brazil and the UK, I developed the ability to see the world from different angles. It is precisely this cultural sensitivity that I pass on to my clients in the different areas of tension of national and regional cultural contexts, organisational cultures, individuals and specific requirements of collaborations.

While my approach is goal and results-oriented, I place equal importance on values and attitudes such as respect, tolerance, cultural openness, empathy, humour and the willingness for continuous self-reflection. It follows that clients from very different organisations and cultural backgrounds, value my ability to perfectly tailor content and method to fit individual requirements.
